

JOB DESCRIPTION

Department:	History
Post Title:	Lecturer in Modern Greek History (3-year post)
Responsible to:	Head of School/ Department

This three-year post offers an opportunity to develop the study of Modern Greek History at Royal Holloway thanks to the generous support of the Greek Ministry of Culture & Sports and the A. G. Leventis Foundation. Since its foundation in 1886 Royal Holloway has built a strong tradition of Classical and Byzantine Studies at the University of London. A variety of courses offer the opportunity to students to study Greek history and culture, and to appreciate its contribution to European civilization. In order to foster this tradition of study the College established the Hellenic Institute in 1993.

The successful candidate will design and/or contribute to undergraduate and postgraduate courses in Modern Greek History with particular emphasis on Greece, Cyprus, and the Balkans, as well as in the wider area of the History of South-Eastern Europe, the Mediterranean, and transnational and diaspora studies. The candidate will be expected to develop this topic across a broad range of levels as well as contributing to other undergraduate teaching in the History Department, such as the Independent Essay module or the Historiography unit, and to MA teaching. He or she will, additionally, participate in the Department's admissions activities and other administrative work, as well as its public engagement work. Relevant teaching experience and a strong research record are essential.

Main Purpose

Our aim is to appoint a lecturer who shows evidence of outstanding ability in research, with a track record of work completed to an unusually high standard and well-conceived plans for future publication and externally funded projects. Lecturers are expected to teach and supervise at undergraduate and postgraduate level, taking full responsibility for the design, management and delivery of their teaching.
